America's favorite garden flowers just got better with this 4 color series of sun loving plants. Compared to other impatiens, they perform better in sun, better in areas of high heat and high humidity, and have more garden vigor than most other impatiens. What makes these A cross between traditional New Guinea impatiens and a wild impatiens. The plants have the good sized flower of a New Guinea but now have strong garden vigor that allows them to grow well in all summer conditions. Garden vigor and a slightly thicker leaf wall are the secret to impatiens sun and heat show.
