

Lady Valentine Chinese Evergreen

Aglaonema Lady Valentine'

- Use: One the most beautiful and rare variety with all leaves looks like cluster of This sturdy plant is wonderfully easy to grow; it tolerates just about every indoor condition. When it's young, this beauty is small enough to fit on desks, tabletops, and other surfaces. It's a slow-growing plant, so you can enjoy it without worrying if it will grow out of bounds. Older, larger plants are suited to growing on the floor --- in corners, next to furniture, or as an accent piece along a wall. The pink tones in this Chinese evergreen's leaves let you have some fun choosing pots. Not recommended for human or animal consumption.
- Exposure/Soil: It tolerates low light well, but also grows well in bright spots where you will have better leaf color. It doesn't even need natural light to thrive -- Chinese evergreen does just fine in offices with fluorescent lighting. Equally low-care when it comes to water; you can water regularly, keeping the soil evenly moist, or water once every few weeks. It doesn't require much fertilizer, but will grow best if fertilized once or twice a year in spring or summer (or every six months) with a general-purpose houseplant fertilizer.
- Growth: Grows slowly 12" tall and 6" wide.
- Hardiness: Zone 10b-11b; Houseplant
- Foliage: Beautifully colored foliage - from pale pink foliage when juvenile, to very deep pink-red when mature, with fresh dark leaf margins.
- Flower: It has cute, calla-lily-like blooms in spots where it gets enough light.

This plant filters pollutants from the air while releasing oxygen. With this plant in your home, you breathe cleaner air.

You can print out this sign at www.growersoutlet.com. Bring back your pots to recycle.