

Calandiva Kalanchoe

A pretty addition to indoor containers or baskets; Large, scalloped glossy leaves complement clusters of amazing double petaled rose-like blooms.

Kalanchoe blossfeldiana 'Calandiva Series'

- Use: Calandiva is a hybrid of flowering Kalanchoe and blooms in the same colors, but the flowers are rose-like. Kalanchoe is a group of exotic succulents prized for their unique foliage and flowers. They come in a wide range of shades from glaucous pastels to splashy jewel tones. These long-lasting, blooming plants will brighten up both your garden and home with their cheery clusters of blooms.
- Exposure/Soil: Need plenty of light to bloom. Place your potted plant close to a sunny window. Keep plant warm; temperatures between 55-80 degrees ° F is ideal. Plant in well-drained, well-aerated soil. It cannot tolerate cold temperatures. Avoid placing plants near drafts or cool windowsills. Like other succulents, kalanchoes do not need much water. Allow the soil to dry out in between waterings. Do not over water, as the roots can be prone to rot. Pinch back or dead-head flowers to encourage more blooms. After deadheading, give the plant a break and reduce watering.
- Growth: Grows slowly 18" tall and 18" wide.
- Hardiness: Zone 10-11, Annual, houseplant. Bring indoors below 50 degrees.
- Foliage: Foliage makes a statement too because it's glossy green and the leaves are quite large.
- Flower: Dainty, rose-like flowers are available in a wide range of colors; most of them vibrant hues like yellow, pink, magenta, white, orange and red.