

Cordyline 'Red Star'

Very easy to grow! Lush tropical look great with banana trees and Mandevilla.

Cordyline australis 'Red Star'

- Exposure/Soil: Full Sun to Part Sun. Needs good light to maintain its color and don't let it dry out between watering. Great for use in borders, beds, and containers. Allow soil to become slightly dry between waterings.
- Growth: Can grow 5' to 6'.
- Hardiness: 7b-11, perennial, houseplant Cordyline or Cabbage Palms are hardy, where Dracaenas are not, so don't be afraid to pair it in the border next to larger leaved plants. We still recommend planting them in SW exposure in sheltered areas so they remain evergreen.
- Foliage: With its long, tropical looking leaves, Cordyline 'Red Star' is an exceptional plant to use for height and texture in container plantings. It has a red foliage and grows to about 36 inches tall and its leaves are longer and more narrow than that of the Dracaenas.
- Flower: Not known for flowers.
